STATEMENT BY THE PARTY OF REGIONS ON ELECTION INTEGRITY

Last week, Prime Minister Victor Yanukovich announced that he and other senior Party of Regions officials had signed a Code of Conduct. This Code of Conduct called for all political parties to commit themselves and their local supporters to conduct their political activities in ways that would ensure an honest and transparent election.

The Prime Minister invited other parties to take this important step and ensure that Ukraine conducts free and fair elections. The Orange tried to argue that producing a Code of Conduct was nothing more than a publicity stunt, but once again the Orange have missed the importance of signing the Code. Instead, they have resorted to politics to cover up their lack of support for an open democracy.

Fair and transparent elections are critical to the international reputation of Ukraine. In 2006 international observers judged our Parliamentary elections to be "free and fair". While this was an important milestone in our democratic history, there is much work to do to bring our election practices up to international standards.

There has been an over reliance on so-called "black PR" by parties and this has lead to an erosion of public credibility for all participants. In the Code of Conduct, The Party of Regions commits itself against such practices and hopes that other parties will not engage in these tactics. The future of our country and its democracy is more important than any short-term partisan gain.

Our opponents have also made a series of accusations about why we have adopted a very strong position around the issues of home voting and absentee balloting. The Party of Regions supports easier access to home voting and believes every citizen that can legally vote should be able to do so. The heart of our democracy will be forged through the participation of every citizen, and their ability to vote is the truest way this democracy can be expressed.

There are close to 1 million disabled Ukrainians who would qualify to cast a ballot at home. Over 600,000 of these people live in the Western and Central regions, traditionally areas of strength for our opponents. If we placed our partisan interests ahead of our commitment to improve Ukraine's democratic systems we would have adopted the exact opposite position. Our stand is based on one basic belief – that these fellow citizens who are disabled deserve every opportunity to cast a ballot and we will continue to fight for their right to do this.

While we continue to have concerns about the tactics used by other parties, the Party of Regions is proud to have taken the lead in ensuring higher electoral standards. We will continue to ask our opponents to join us in any future efforts to enhance the integrity of Ukraine democracy and perhaps the Orange will sign the Code of Conduct. This issue is too important to place behind the partisan issues of any party or Bloc – signing the Code shows the people that we are serious about free and fair elections.

Statement Regarding the Verkhovna Rada Session of September 04, 2007

Party of Regions Deputies attended a special session of the Verkhovna Rada (Parliament) on September 4th to address legislation that would prohibit deputy and presidential immunity. This issue is recognized as one of extreme importance to the people of Ukraine, and as promised, the Party of Regions wanted to ensure that immunity was cancelled before the elections.

Despite the absence of Orange deputies, a total of 261 Deputies voted to repeal immunity and special privileges and benefits for all government officials, marking a significant achievement for all Ukrainians and our democracy. No longer can politicians hide behind protectionist measures, but will be accountable to the people. The Party of Regions is proud to have been part of this achievement, and will continue to support those initiatives which will ensure the development of our democracy.

It is important for the people to understand the games the Orange have played on this and many other issues. Following statements indicating that the Orange deputies would attend the session, the Orange parties did not participate. After months of discussion regarding the deputy immunity issue, and after strong support from the Orange in repealing the immunity, the Orange failed to deliver on their word and broke another promise to the people.

Once again, the Orange allowed ambition and petty politics to interfere in their work. Once again, we have heard the Orange say they believe one thing which they know the people support and then fail to act on their promise. Now, the Orange attack the VR for taking this action. The Orange cannot call this achievement a publicity stunt or trickery. Voting in favor of repealing deputy immunity is a real achievement – it is something the Party of Regions and other parties committed to do and we did it.

For months we have listened to the Orange talk about democracy including the repeal of immunity. Yet the Orange have done nothing to promote democracy, not when they were in power and not when they have been in opposition – and in the one instance where they could have been a part of something important to the people, they failed to participate. If the Orange were serious about helping build our democracy they would have participated in the Rada session to end immunity.

The Orange consistently fail to deliver – they have failed as a government, they have failed in passing needed reforms, but most of all they have failed the people.

The Verkhovna Rada session yesterday was an important step to show the people that the Party of Regions is serious about addressing important issues and will achieve crucial reforms. The time to act is now and we did so. In multiple polls across the country over 70% of the people wanted to remove deputy immunity. We listened to the people and we fulfilled our commitment to making a difference in building a better government.
